GOING TO CONGRESS

By Hal E. Roach ✓

Will Rogers, a lazy farmer in a strictly rural community does a lot of heavy sitting around a stove in the general store and runs the Government affairs from his seat in this select circle of slick politicians daily congregating there. With election day near at hand, the rural folk admiring the many wise cracks as to how Government should be run, which have been dropped from the lips of Will, elect him to go to Congress. His sudden injection into National affairs and the trip to Washington with his family supply abundant means for comedy which is duly and carefully handled by the new Congressman - DOOLITTLE. We leave him climbing the Capitol steps.
